Texas Teacher of the Year a TTT success story

Another Troops to Teachers participant has been recognized once again for excellent work in Texas! Daniel Leija, with Esparza Elementary School in San Antonio, is the 2011 Texas Elementary Teacher of the Year. He learned of winning this honor at a special surprise ceremony and luncheon on Oct. 15, 2010.

He was awarded a cash prize of $5,000, a SMART Board technology package worth more than $16,500 for his campus, a laptop computer, commemorative trophy, and other gifts. He was first selected as Region 20's Texas Elementary Teacher of the Year, and then was named a statewide finalist.

"Mr. Leija truly is an inspirational teacher, and I am so happy and so proud that he is receiving this outstanding recognition," Superintendent John Folks said. "He is committed to our students, and he works hard to make sure they not only learn, but develop a love of learning."

"He is a testament to all that is right with public education."
John Folks
Northside Superintendent

Leija has picked up a nickname around campus as "Dan, Dan the Science Man" due to his reputation with weekly science experiments that bring to life classroom topics. It is not just the students that love to be in his classroom, Esparza faculty are known to enjoy the presentations of the experiments and the science collections used to make the classroom experience interesting and "real life." The experiments are so well done they are regularly broadcast campus-wide using the schools in-house TV system.

Not only does Leija work with the students in Esparza Elementary School, he volunteers some of his time to mentor separating military personnel interested in teaching as a second career as part of the Troops to Teachers program, which he himself participated in. Leija retired from the U.S. Air Force in 2000, then spent four years in the Troops to Teachers program before starting his second career. He is now a veteran twice over - 21 years in the Air Force and 10 years as a teacher.

"Preparing for combat situations and war zones was nothing compared to facing 21 kindergartners my first morning as a teacher."
Daniel Leija

"Teaching is not just my job; it is my calling, my passion, my legacy," Leija said. "It is imperative to provide the guidance and leadership to help chart their course through life's rough waters and cheer them on to success."

"Dan, Dan the Science Man" - you've done your nation and school proud!

EXAMINATIONS NEWS

Online TCO course a resounding success

Last Spring DANTES transitioned to an online Test Control Officer (TCO) Academic Testing Course, replacing the traditional classroom training held in Pensacola and the 50-question TCO exam administered at Education Centers where TCOs once received local training. Now that the online TCO training course has been operational for almost a year, it is time to assess the program's overall effectiveness.

Since May 2010 more than 200 perspective TCOs have successfully completed the online TCO Academic Testing Course achieving an average score of 94 making the program a resounding success! The online program has reduced travel and per diem costs for the military services by an estimated $375,000. More than 90 students are currently enrolled.

The TCO Academic Testing Course provides comprehensive examination information in a 24/7 delivery mode and potential TCO candidates nominated by their headquarters/major commands receive standardized TCO training in a self-paced program. The current DANTES Examination Program Handbook is also accessible in the course for completing the course modules and for taking the final open book exam.

Potential TCO candidates must still be nominated by their headquarters/major commands before they are allowed access to the TCO Academic Testing Course. The course is also available to Test Examiners being appointed by TCOs. After DANTES receives a system notification of successful completion of the online course, the nomination is processed and the candidate is appointed. Requests for refresher training may also be provided for a TCO/ATCO or Examiner upon request from a headquarters/major command.

For more information about the TCO Academic Testing Course, contact exams@navy.mil.

Funded CDFM pilot nears end

The Certified Defense Finance Manager (CDFM) funded pilot that began in 2009 has less than 20 vouchers remaining for eligible military members to test. Personnel meeting the American Society of Military Comptrollers (ASMC) standards to sit for the exam may request a voucher via the Personnel Certification Support System (PCSS). The PCSS Web site is located at pcss.dod.mil and requires the prospective examinee's common access card (CAC) to log on.

Refer inquiries on the PCSS to their Help Desk that links from the PCSS Web site. For questions on eligibility or other concerns, contact the DANTES Credentialing Program at certprog@navy.mil or 850-452-1111 Ext. 3194/3213 or DSN 922-1111 Ext. 3194/3213

EDUCATION OUTREACH NEWS

DoD Worldwide 2012 Call for Proposals ends April 30

Are you passionate about educating the force? Most of us are. Perhaps you have something of value to offer fellow attendees at the next DoD Worldwide Education Symposium (WW12), to be held July 23-27, 2012, in Las Vegas, Nev. If this is the case, don't hesitate. Submit your concept proposal during the WW12 Call for Proposals period which ends this month, April 30.

The symposium's theme is "Educating the Force--Joint Effort, Joint Success" and, to support the theme, five tracks have been identified by the Worldwide Planning Committee. They include:

- » Outcomes, Quality & ROI (Return on Investment)
- » Innovations in Educating the Force
- » Best Practices in Education (Support)
- » New Counselor Development
- » Issues in a Joint Environment

Submitting a concept proposal is relatively simple. First, register online at ww2012.com as a prospective speaker. (Note: This is not registration for the conference itself.) Once registered as a speaker, continue with your proposal submission by following the prompts. Only your abstract and a brief description of the concept are required at this time. If selected, your final draft will not be required until July 2012.

We realized that there is some hesitation since we are still more than a year out. The planning committee needs time to review all submissions and to identify most of the program before registration commences on Oct. 1, 2011. For Worldwide 2009, more than 150 proposals were considered. Proposals submitted after the official call cannot receive the consideration that is necessary.

Do not allow concern over whether you can attend or whether you will still occupy your current position prevent a great topic from being submitted. The case for attending will only improve if you are a selected speaker. Besides, the planning committee is accustomed to making last-minute adjustments to the program should presenters or panelists change or even be forced to drop out.

So, again, if you have a bright concept or practice to share--don't delay. Submit your proposal for consideration. DoD Worldwide will once again deliver a top-notch program that strives to cover a broad range of topics and features speakers with fresh ideas who may have never before stepped into the VolEd spotlight.

For more information or to submit a proposal offline, e-mail dantesww@navy.mil.

FROM THE DESK OF THE ADVISOR

HMCM (FMF/SW) David Acuff
Senior Enlisted Advisor

Are you aware that job skills you acquire while on active duty or in the reserves may translate into civilian credentials? Credentialing is a DoD-wide program that benefits all Service members, no matter which uniform they wear. Credentialing (certification or licensure) documents a person's level of competency and achievement in a particular career or skill area.

Professionally recognized credentials are used widely in the civilian sector to validate skills, knowledge, and abilities. Most jobs in the military translate into the civilian sector, but many Service members fail to realize that without that professional certification, the job they may be applying for could be unobtainable.

I want to share a success story of a young Sailor I know and what credentialing meant to him and his family. Last year, Allan decided to make the transition into civilian life after completing eight years of honorable service and four successful tours as a Navy Corpsman deployed with the Marines in Iraq and Afghanistan. Allan was stunned when he took leave a few months prior to separating and learned that he couldn't find an appropriate job anywhere in the medical community based on his military training and experience. This "Doc" was "decorated," had literally "been-there-and-done-that" and was "top-of-his-game," but since he did not possess the professionally recognized civilian credentials, no hospital or clinic could hire him into the positions that closely matched his extensive experience. Allan was devastated to learn that monetarily his family would suffer since he was unable to be hired at a salary commensurate with his military qualifications. Even more frustrating was the fact that many employers wanted to hire Allan due to his military training and experience, but were unable due to his lack of civilian credentials/certifications. Upon Allan's return from leave, he voiced concern to the Command Career Counselor who introduced him to Navy Credentialing Opportunities On-line (Navy COOL). Here he learned which civilian credentials matched his military vocations experiences and what he needed to obtain them. Allan also learned that there were programs, including the Post 9-11 GI Bill, that paid credentialing fees. Needless to say, Allan took full advantage of the Navy COOL information and obtained a significant number of health-care certifications before leaving the military. Allan now has a satisfying and decent-paying job at the hospital in his hometown.

Loretta Cornett-Huff honored at February CCME Conference

For only the third time in the 36-year history of the Council of College and Military Educator's (CCME), the CCME Lifetime Achievement Award has been bestowed on an individual who has made significant fundamental contributions in military education. This award honors a distinguished career of consistent excellence that has made a lasting impact on higher education opportunities for the military education community. Loretta Cornett-Huff, with over 40 years dedicated to the military education community, most assuredly deserves the honor of receiving the 2011 CCME Lifetime Achievement Award.

Cornett-Huff has served the U.S. Department of the Interior, U.S. Navy and U.S. Marine Corps in educational positions for over 40 years. Her initiation into the world of DoD's Voluntary Education programs occurred when she became the first education specialist selected for the newly initiated Navy Campus for Achievement at Pearl Harbor. She opened the first education office for sub-base at Pearl Harbor and later was promoted to a position in Guam in 1980 at COMNAV Marianas. From Guam, she returned to Hawaii as deputy for the area coordinator, A.L. Temple, with Navy Campus. From Hawaii, she was selected for the education services officer (ESO) position for Naval Air Station, Adak, Alaska. From there, Cornett-Huff phased into the head position for the Navy's Pacific AFLOAT program and literally hit the deck running, as college programs aboard large ships gained popularity.

Loretta Cornett-Huff receives the CCME Lifetime Achievement Award at the 2011 CCME Conference in Tampa, Fla.

A few months into the AFLOAT position, she was selected as the Navy Campus Far East area coordinator, based in Yokosuka, Japan. Cornett-Huff assumed the responsibilities for Navy education for mainland Japan, Okinawa and Korea. Her latest 19 years of service has been as the command ESO for the Marine Corps Base Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay and Camp H.M. Smith.

Cornett-Huff has received numerous government, professional and community awards, including honors for initiating the Tuition Assistance pilot study for the Marine Corps that utilized the existing Navy College Management Information System (NCMIS) partnership. Approval and endorsements from the Navy and Marine Corps resulted in a partnership for use of NCMIS by the USMC. The result was effective tracking, savings and the recoupment of millions of TA dollars. In 2010, she was the Marine Corps co-recipient of the first Barry Cobb award.

She was married to the late Paul E. Huff, Ph.D., a recognized visionary in military education and member of the Adult and Continuing Education Hall of Fame.

This award recognizes Cornett-Huff's unwavering dedication and a lifetime commitment to Service members, their families, and military education. Her outstanding and tireless efforts to "making a difference" in the community of military education for so many years is a legacy that will always be remembered and acknowledged by the voluntary education world.

New NTC opens in Vilseck, Germany

U.S. Army Garrison Grafenwoehr held a ribbon cutting ceremony March 10, 2011, to celebrate a new National Testing Center (NTC) in Vilseck, Germany. The NTC supports communities in the greater areas of Hohenfels, Graffenwoehr and Vilseck.

The University of Maryland University College-Europe (UMUC-E) operates the NTC, which provides a convenient way to take CLEP, DSST, and Pearson VUE exams close to home and with immediate results. These exams play an important role in helping Soldiers and other community members advance towards their academic and professional goals.
