

The National Environmental Health Association (NEHA)

The National Environmental Health Association (NEHA) administers their exam with computer based delivery. The NEHA web site is <http://www.neha.org/>.

Authorized DANTES/Pearson VUE test sites may administer the NEHA exams. The National Environmental Health Association (NEHA) was founded in 1937 and today is a strong professional society with over 5,000 members across the nation. NEHA offers a variety of programs and member benefits for the Environmental Health Professional. NEHA develops professional credentials to establish a definition of what is competency in the practice of a given profession. Some credentials are made into licenses without which professional practice is prohibited by action of the state. In many cases, state authorities use NEHA exams to license their environmental health professionals. In other instances, credentials serve as more of a voluntary though highly respected demonstration of a mastery of a given body of knowledge, skills and abilities. NEHA offers eight nationally recognized credentials within the environmental health profession. Each credential signifies a level of expertise and competence based on education and experience.
